Update from the Canadian Chamber of Commerce

Federal Government Extends Time Periods Given To Employers To Recall Employees Laid Off Due To COVID-19

Prior to these changes, employers could temporarily layoff their employees for up to three months if no notice with a recall date was provided or for a period of up to six months if they provided a notice with an expected recall date before the layoff became a termination. The amendments, which are set out in the Canada Labour Standards Regulations, temporarily extend these time periods by up to six months:

- For employees laid off prior to March 31, 2020, the time period is extended by six months or to December 30, 2020, whichever occurs first.
- For employees laid off between March 31, 2020 and September 30, 2020, the time period is extended until December 30, 2020 unless a later recall date was provided in a written notice at the time of the layoff.

These changes, which came into effect on June 22, 2020, do not apply to employees who are covered by a collective agreement that contains recall rights. More Information

We need your input!

Almost as soon as the pandemic was declared in Canada, we knew that businesses across the country would want to keep in touch with "the news." We quickly set up our COVID-19 Bulletin that now reaches more than 8,400 people daily with news about government programs, virtual events provided through our partners and helpful resources from across the country. In short order, we also set up our Canadian Business Resilience Network website, CBRN.ca, which has become a hub for COVID-19-related information and programming.

In the last month, as things have started to change and some jurisdictions have begun phases of reopening, we wanted to check in with you and get your feedback on the communications products that we have in place. We've developed a brief survey that will take no more than five minutes to complete. We'd appreciate your feedback as we fine tune what we send to you and the frequency of our distribution. Our survey will be open until June 30; please share your thoughts.
