HOW TO BUY EMPLOYEE GROUP BENEFITS

Employee benefits are an important part of your staff's financial security and an investment in your company's success. Whether you're a first-time buyer shopping for the best plan, or you already have benefits but are considering a switch, there are some important aspects to think about when weighing the pros and cons of employee group benefits.

COVERAGE | The first decision you need to make is the type of plan you want. Although a packaged benefit plan is quick to set up, it may include coverage you don't want — or it might be missing coverage you need. Value is just as important as price, so consider a custom plan. After all, you're more likely to use benefits that you choose.

PREMIUM STABILITY | Most benefit plans are experience rated, which means that premiums are based on your company's individual claims. But if you only have a few employees, and they have large claims, your rates could rise dramatically.

To help keep your premiums more stable from year to year, look for a pooled plan where premiums are based on the average of claims across all participants, spreading the risk.

GUARANTEES | Look for a plan with the fewest exclusions and the most assurances, like guaranteed renewable coverage or benefits that don't require medical questionnaires. This makes your coverage more valuable in the long term. Guarantees also tell you a lot about the organization that you will be dealing with.

CLAIM PAYMENTS | Look for plans that provide quick claim payment. Some will offer direct deposits into employees' bank accounts, or point-of-purchase drug coverage, paid right at the pharmacy. The higher quality the plan, the more efficient and convenient the payment options will be.

LONGEVITY | Make sure the plan you choose is a good fit for today and for the future. Always select a supplier with a broad range of coverage options, and one that lets you have a say in your plan's evolution. A qualified advisor from a reputable plan will have access to cost-control tools, and can help you plan for the future while addressing your current needs.
